

Do you have what it takes to become health care's next Spike Milligan?

Write your own medication safety-focused limerick, and be in to win!

The Health Quality & Safety Commission is looking for the next star of the literary world, to write a fun and entertaining limerick about medication safety.

The limerick should:

- highlight the current Open for better care topic – high-risk medicines
- use one of the following: opioids, anticoagulant, adverse reaction
- follow a standard limerick format
- be fun and light-hearted!

1st prize:
$100 voucher to the restaurant of your choice.

2nd prize:
Morning tea for your team valued at $50.

Here's an example to get you started:

*A doctor's medication safety expertise
Helped her treatment of complex disease
Her diagnosis gained traction
Fixed an adverse reaction
And her patient didn't even have to say please.*

Visit www.open.hqsc.govt.nz/patient-safety-week for full competition details and to submit your entry.